

Stress Management

Let's face it—the past six months have been very stressful for everyone. Providing care for others during this pandemic can lead to stress, fear, anxiety...and more. How you cope with these emotions affects not only your well-being, but also the care you give your clients. This newsletter explores what stress looks like, offers practical ways to deal with stress, and provides resources if you need help...

Symptoms of Stress

Do you have any of the following symptoms of stress?

- Feeling annoyed, angry, or in denial
- Feeling uncertain, nervous, or anxious
- Feeling helpless or powerless
- Lacking motivation
- Feeling tired, overwhelmed, or burned out
- Feeling sad or depressed
- Having trouble sleeping
- Having trouble concentrating

Did you know...
You will be better able to care for others when you are able to manage your stress and meet your own needs.

Tips to Help You Cope

The following are some tips to help you manage your stress:

- ⇒ Talk about work stress with co-workers and your supervisor.
- ⇒ Share how the pandemic is affecting your work.
- ⇒ Ask for help in finding ways to cope.
- ⇒ Learn about mental health resources in your workplace or community.
- ⇒ Remind yourself that everyone is facing their own stress.
- ⇒ Accept those things over which you do not have control.
- ⇒ Know that you are doing the best you can.
- ⇒ Keep a daily routine when possible.
- ⇒ Try to get enough sleep.
- ⇒ Bring healthy meals and snacks to work if possible
- ⇒ Do things you enjoy while not at work.
- ⇒ Spend time outdoors.
- ⇒ Stay informed, but limit the amount of news and social media you read, watch, or listen to.
- ⇒ If you feel you may be misusing alcohol or other drugs (including prescriptions), ask for help.
- ⇒ Remember to focus on your breathing to help calm down and clear your mind.
- ⇒ Stay connected with friends and family.
